

Thursday, May 16:

1. Log on to Edmodo
2. Open your saved word document. Remember to keep track of your URLs there.
3. Finish research/note taking on paper.
4. When you have enough notes, write a paragraph (from your individual's perspective) introducing yourself to the group. Tell who you are, where you are from, when you lived (and died...I know this is tricky as you are writing from the individual's perspective, but it's a necessary piece of information, so be creative and include it), and what you were known for. 4-5 sentences. Type on the same word document where you've been keeping track of your websites. Proofread!
5. Copy and paste your paragraph to the Edmodo wall and post it to the class.
6. As other people post, read their introductions. Look for individuals that you can ask questions to or find people you have similarities to / connections with.
7. Reply to a minimum of 2 posts (as in, that's not enough for an A). Remember:
  - a. Replies MUST be 1-2 full, proofread sentences and show that you have read the person's post and are giving a thoughtful reply.
  - b. Help out your classmates – if people don't have any or many replies, please notice this and reply to them with a thoughtful question or comment.
  - c. I will critique original posts – there is no need for your reply to tell the author that they spelled something wrong or are missing some required fact.
  - d. Replies that are not full sentences (you know, start with a capital letter, end with punctuation and have all the other right parts in between...) will lose points. Replies such as “that's cool” or “me, too” take up extra space on the wall and do not contribute to the discussion. They, too, will lose points and make it harder for your peers to look through posts and see who has replies and who doesn't.
  - e. Remember that you'll have to click “show more” at the bottom of the screen as all posts and replies will not fit on one page.

This isn't Facebook. This is a graded assignment.

8. Your next post will be about your individual's greatest challenge. Research this. Take notes on paper and record URLs on your Word document. Do not Google “Michelangelo's greatest challenge” – think about what you know about him, or find out more, then THINK about what his greatest challenge would have been.
